HARRISON COLORS IN OIL

For Decorative Work and General Tinting

For over 100 years Harrison Colors in Oil (now under the Du Pont Black Label) have been recognized as the standard by which Oil Colors in general are judged. Their exceptional fineness and unsurpassed tinting strength have made them very popular with the master painter who appreciates purity of tone and unusual tinting power.

Great care has been given to the selection of the dry colors used in the manufacture of the Harrison Line, only those having the correct initial color, color undertone and tinting strength being used.

The Harrison earth colors especially have always been outstanding, and enjoy a wide reputation for purity, no adulterants whatsoever being used in their formulation. These earth colors—French Ochre, Van Dyke Brown, Umbers and Siennas—are the purest obtainable and are all selected from many samples submitted to us.

Oil colors should never be purchased solely on a basis of price. They should be purchased on a basis of tinting strength commensurate with the price, although initial color and undertone are important factors.

This card shows the straight colors and the reduction strength of those most generally used for tinting.
